

26 May

Dear Mr Scott,

When I was reading First News this week I came across the fundraising 'Jeans For Genes Day', so I'm writing to ask for your support to register for this day.

This event will take place 22 September to support children with genetic disorders all over the UK. The only thing everyone in the school has to do is wear their jeans and donate £1 on that day.

Supporting an event like this will give the chance for all of us to reflect on what life might be like when you have a disability or when people stare at you because of the way you look.

I know the school is already involved in various fundraising events, but I felt so moved by some of the stories and how unfair life seems to be to other children that I wish we could do something to make a difference.

Please, let's wear our jeans for a great cause!
